

Kathryn Goldman

Kathryn (Katie) Goldman is a Climate Policy Advisor in the Los Angeles Mayor's Office of Sustainability. She brings to the role extensive experience in climate change policy, ranging from mitigation of greenhouse gas emissions to land use planning and local climate adaptation. When Katie first joined the Mayor's office, she coordinated Los Angeles' engagement in the C40 Cities Climate Leadership Group as City Advisor to Los Angeles. Katie began her career in the federal government at the US Department of Agriculture and US Environmental Protection Agency in Washington DC, working on domestic and international climate policy in the agriculture and forestry sectors. Since moving to Los Angeles in 2006, she has been an independent consultant and has worked for the non-profits organizations Climate Action Reserve, Climate Resolve, and the Greenhouse Gas Institute. She has also been an instructor for UCLA's Institute of the Environment and Sustainability, where she mentored undergraduates in completing capstone climate policy projects for clients.
