

Theodore J. Paradise is the Assistant General Counsel, Operations & Planning at ISO New England Inc. where he and his team of attorneys oversee legal issues related to power system operations, regional and interregional transmission planning, siting, cost allocation, generator interconnection and retirement, and related FERC and NERC reliability and compliance matters. In his practice, Theodore regularly address issues regarding the changing nature of the power system, from one with hundreds of large power generators to a system where hundreds of thousands of generating assets come in all sizes and capabilities. This evolving grid now sees supply interconnecting at all voltage levels across the transmission and distribution systems, which is blurring once clear jurisdictional lines and creating novel operating issues. Prior to joining the ISO in March of 2004, Theodore was an attorney with the energy practice group of Swidler Berlin Shereff Friendman LLP in Washington, DC where he represented an independent grid operator and investor-owned public utilities. Theodore received his Juris Doctor from Georgetown University Law Center and his B.A. in History from the University of Idaho.
