Andrei Tarkovsky died in a Paris hospital in 1986, aged just 54. An internationally acclaimed icon of the film industry, the legacy Tarkovsky left for his fans included Andrei Rublev, Stalker, Nostalgia and a host of other brilliant works. In the Soviet Union, however, Tarkovsky was a persona non grata. Longing to be accepted in his homeland, Tarkovsky distanced himself from all forms of political and social engagement, yet endured one failure after another in his relations with the Soviet regime. The Soviet authorities regarded the law-abiding, ideologically moderate Tarkovsky as an outsider and a nuisance, due to his imperceptible personal nature. The documentary novel A Life on the Cross provides a unique insight into the life of Andrei Tarkovsky, the enigmatic film director and a man whose life was by no means free of unfavouring behaviour and errors of judgement. Lyudmila Boyadzhieva sets out to reveal his innate talent, and explain why the cost of such talent can sometimes be his life itself. Featuring profound comments on history and cinema as an accompaniment to the text, Andrei Tarkovsky: A Life on the Cross enables readers to step into Tarkovsky’s shoes as he put together his masterpieces, seeking ways to solve his artistic dilemmas and overcome the obstacles that the Soviet regime put in his way.

Andrei Tarkovsky is the most celebrated Russian filmmaker since Eisenstein, and one of the most important directors to have emerged during the 1960s and 70s. Although he made only seven features, each one was a major landmark in cinema, the most well-known of them being the mediaeval epic Andrei Rublev - widely regarded as one of the greatest films of all time - and the autobiographical Mirror, set during the Russian Stalin era. In the 1960s and 70s, Tarkovsky was one of the few directors to have crossed the cultural and ideological barriers that separated the Western world and the Soviet Union. He was a paradox - both an agent of cultural exchange and a symbol of resistance. The documentary novel A Life on the Cross provides a unique insight into the life of this enigmatic film director and a man whose life was by no means free of unfavouring behaviour and errors of judgement. Lyudmila Boyadzhieva sets out to reveal his innate talent, and explain why the cost of such talent can sometimes be his life itself. Andrei Tarkovsky was the most important Russian filmmaker of the post-war era, and one of the world's most renowned cinematic geniuses. His reputation has grown significantly in recent years, and he is particularly known for his re-imagining of the science fiction genre in films such as Solaris and Stalker. Tarkovsky is revealed here both as a cinematic thinker and as an artistic alchemist—whether a film by a Russian director or a book by one of our most gifted contemporary writers—can shape the way we see the world and how we make our way through it.

In Zona, a writer whose mystery encompasses fiction, criticism, and the fertile realm between the two, a new book that confirms his reputation for the unexpected. In Zona, Geoff Dyer attempts to unlock the mysteries of a film that has haunted him ever since he first saw it thirty years ago: Andrei Tarkovsky’s Stalker, widely regarded as one of the greatest films of all time. (“Every single frame,” declared Cate Blanchett, “is burned into my mind.”) It is a mystery that gives free rein to the brilliance of Dyer’s distinctive voice—acute observation, melancholy, lyricism, and occasional ill-temper—Zona takes us on a wonderfully unpredictable journey in which we try to fathom, and realize, our deepest wishes. Zona is one of the most unusual books ever written about film, and about how art—whether a film by a Russian director or a book by one of our most gifted contemporary writers—can shape the way we see the world and how we make our way through it.

Life, Life

LIFE, LIFE is a book of poetry by Russian poet Andrey Tarkovsky, translated by Virginia Bounding. Includes many poems used in Arseny Tarkovsky’s solaris (Andrey Tarkovsky). With a bibliography of both Arseny and Andrey Tarkovsky, and illustrations from Tarkovsky’s movies. This is one of the very few translations in English of poetry by Andrey Tarkovsky. AVAILABLE FROM THE INTRODUCTION: Andrey Aleksandrovich Tarkovsky was born in January 1932 in Moscow, later moved to Leningrad, and spent much of his life in the Soviet Union towards the end of his life. An entry written after Arseny had given a talk at the Moscow Physic Institute in 1980, for instance, reproduces the following note from a member of the audience: “An enormous number of people in this hall admire Arseny Aleksandrovich Tarkovsky as a great Russian poet. Please convey our respects to him.” One of the few Russian authors to appear in the first English language edition of the Complete Works of Arseny Tarkovsky, and also worked in the editorial office of the journal Gudok. He was well respected as a translator, scientist, and a great Russian poet. His poems did not begin to appear in book form until he was over fifty. His son, the film director Andrei Tarkovsky, made extensive use of his father’s in some of his films, and contains a number of essays that give free rein to the brilliance of Dyer’s distinctive voice—acute observation, melancholy, lyricism, and occasional ill-temper—Zona takes us on a wonderfully unpredictable journey in which we try to fathom, and realize, our deepest wishes. Zona is one of the most unusual books ever written about film, and about how art—whether a film by a Russian director or a book by one of our most gifted contemporary writers—can shape the way we see the world and how we make our way through it.

Andrei Tarkovsky's Sounding Cinema

Andrei Tarkovsky's Sounding Cinema provides an analysis of Tarkovsky's later films. Charting the stylistic and narrative innovations in Mirror, Stalker, Nostalghia and Zabruda, this book presents extended sequences of stills from each of the films alongside synopses and cast and crew listings. It includes reflections on Tarkovsky's work from fellow artists and writers including Jean-Paul Sartre and Ingmar Bergman, for whom Tarkovsky was "the greatest, the one who invented a new language." Extracts from Tarkovsky's own writings and diaries offer a wealth of insights into his poetic and philosophical views on cinema, which he described as "sculpting in time." The book also reproduces personal Polaroid photographs that confirm the extraordinary poetic vision of a great artist who died aged only 54, but who remains a potent influence on artists and filmmakers today.

One of the most significant Russian poets of the mid-twentieth century, Andrei Tarkovsky was the son of the film director Andrei Tarkovsky (1932-1986) and the poet Arseny Tarkovsky (1906-1979). Their shared creativity was evident in the images that were taken in Italy while he was travelling with Tonino Guerra and reproduced the following note from a member of the audience: ‘An enormous number of people in this hall admire Arseny Aleksandrovich Tarkovsky as a great Russian poet. Andrei Tarkovsky’s Sounding Cinema - Tobias Pontara - 2019-12-11

Andrei Tarkovsky’s Sounding Cinema adds a new dimension to our understanding and appreciation of the work of Russian filmmaker Andrei Tarkovsky. By examining the film’s music, the book explores the film’s use of music and the role of music in Tarkovsky’s work. The book includes analyses of Tarkovsky’s films, interviews with film theorists, critics and philosophers taking up the challenge to decipher what these films actually mean. It reproduces the following note from a member of the audience: ‘An enormous number of people in this hall admire Arseny Aleksandrovich Tarkovsky as a great Russian poet. Please convey our respects to him.’ One of the few Russian authors to appear in the first English language edition of the Complete Works of Arseny Tarkovsky, and also worked in the editorial office of the journal Gudok.
